The Giants

Once upon a dark and scary midnight, I was woken up by the sound of trembling footsteps that sounded like it was from the foggy city streets. I opened the curtains to my window and saw a silhouette of a monstrous giant figure, that was about ten feet and was roaming the city streets picking up innocent children and throwing them like little action figures. On the other part of the city, giants were throwing buildings as though they were javelins for a sport competition.

"By golly," I exclaimed in horror, "This is just the most horrible thing I've seen!"

Right then, a hand the size of a flatscreen TV broke through the sturdy roof of my house and dragged me by the leg to his face. We were now staring at each other face-to-face. He had teeth that were as terribly bad condition and facial hair that could have well inhabited a family of rats but not a single strand of hair stood on his head.

"Well look what we've got here," the titan boomed, "Fresh meat".

They squeaked me with their grimy, filthy hands and ran (at quite a surprisingly fast speed) through Europe; past Germany where I could see a lot of ruined castles, Poland where it was very snowy, and brought me to a small peninsula in Southeast Asia.

He finally came to a stop at a deserted place with no sign of civilization for thousands of miles. Then he chuckled me down a rusty-looking boiler. I thought I was dead for a second until I saw a cockpit at the end and (thank goodness) landed safely on it. Still dazed by the flash of events that happened in the last 10 minutes, I carefully typed inside, and I couldn't believe my eyes. I saw a giant control panel with an octopus controlling it and thousands of titan like the one that took me here were working on something special, like a cyborg suit of some sort but a thousand times bigger than all the giants rolled up into a ball. I was astonished that people have not been able to find this earlier.

"We found another one, boss," a giant spoke.

"Good job, my missions," the eight-tentacle creature boomed, "I know exactly what to do with him".

The octopus proceeded to take me to a giant aquarium and hundreds of people were suspended in it! I did not want to go there, but he put me in anyway.

"So, he put you in here?" someone uttered discreetly.

"Who's he?" I questioned.

"The Kraken," he whispered being careful not to let the octopus hear our conversation. "He captures humans and places them in this anti-gravity glass box."

"Why?" I asked.

"Because he wants to."

"We should find a way out of here," I confidently.

"Agreed," he replied.

It was a peculiar feeling inside the anti-gravity glass box, it felt as if you were skydiving infinitely. The anti-gravity allowed us to fly around in the massive glass box making it easier for us to try and find a way out of the Kraken's HQ. My newfound friend called me because he had found a peculiar orange key.

It was not like jiffy; it did not know how that key could fit in any keyholes, but we decided to keep looking. We eventually found something covered with moss that looked abandoned. We uncovered it to find a trapdoor with a keyhole and attempted to fit the key in the hole and it worked. We created the flip-open, and it led to some sort of a sewer. I feel uneasy when I go into the sewers, but my friend told me that we needed to go now if we wanted to make it before the Kraken finds that we were not in the Anti-Gravity glass tank.

We climbed down the metallic ladders that led to the sewer and onto the sewer pavements and roamed around searching for a way out of this murky, damp place and back into our comfortable homes. Then we found a shocking discovery: slugs. There were giant slugs in this sewer, and they did not look friendly. The slimy monsters charged at us, and we were unarmed and vulnerable. We decided to just accept our fate until a familiar silhouette, it was the giant! He obliterated the slugs, and we were now safe and sound.

"Thank you giant!" we both said in unison.

"You're welcome," the friendly giant replied.

We decided to let the giant go with us as he wanted to find the exit too. We asked why he didn't want to stay at the Kraken's headquarters, and he explained that the Kraken treated not just the humans badly, but the giants too, and he was the only one brave enough to escape the mighty iron fist of the terrible Kraken. And there we were climbing the depths of the sewers, hanging onto the little hope we had that we could escape back to reality. Although we were starting to lose hope rapidly, we kept on searching until we found it.

The light.

We immediately scrambled to the exit, and we rushed outside to find that it was coming from the Kraken's HQ. We got tricked by this seemingly innocent giant into thinking that we had escaped, that we had a chance to make it; it was all a big trick, and now we were smack in the middle of the HQ, and the giants surrounded every corner of it. The Kraken chuckled us with its mighty tentacles and squashed us into an enormous cannon and cannonballed us through the roof and we went flying, flying back to our country, Britain. We landed on a tree in a snowy forest in the middle of nowhere. We were still dazed by the events that had happened in the past few days until we realized that we were actually on the surface. We jumped with pride and joy, both my friend and me.

My friend and I were deciding on a place to set camp until the weather settled because it was getting cold. I was worried I could get frostbite. After walking around for a while, we stumbled upon an abandoned little cottage and decided to stay there.

Who would notice that we were gone?

实地考察

很高兴看到老师们为我们的孩子安排各种校外的学习体验。祝贺我们 FS2 的孩子们冒险穿过马路到 C-Mart 购买水果，然后再回到学校做出美味的水果沙拉。

5P 计算

本周 5P 的计算截止日期已经过去。所有孩子都成功地添加了精灵（太阳和行星）、背景并将他们的精灵编码为围绕太阳运行。

一些学生甚至更进一步考虑行星相对于彼此的轨道速度。他们以地球为基地，让水星的轨道变慢，木星的轨道变快，等等。这是对比率一个很好的介绍，因为它有助于加强重力的概念及其对轨道速度的影响，并为正确编码提供了巨大的挑战。
